

To whom it may concern,

I am more than happy to be writing this letter of recommendation on behalf of the YWCA of McLean County. With roots dating back to 1908, YWCA of McLean County has been a vital resource in the community of Bloomington, Illinois.

The YWCA of McLean County believes that the community is the top priority and is committed to helping women, children, seniors, and families. The array of services and programs offered are all vital in helping people in the community who may be in a vulnerable state. Counselling, day care services, mentoring programs, mission education, and training programs are just a few of its offerings.

The skilled and qualified staff at YWCA McLean County believe in the shared missions and values that date back to the organization's founding roots. Through these values of compassion, commitment and courage, the team of trustworthy and passionate individuals have helped people in the community face some of their greatest challenges. They value listening and learning as a basis for helping marginalized communities while being committed leaders in racial justice and female empowerment.

YWCA McLean County is an important organization that provides vital support and services to those who need it most. Its commitment to social justice, safety, and inclusion is evident in every program they offer, and its efforts are creating real change in the lives of many.

Sincerely,

David Dow
